General Assembly rarely does more the usual recess than organize, apcommittees, and cut out work for the ear. This, of course, is looking at hipect from the statesman's stand-who does not regard the local measured as consequential. To allow a o build a fence or a wharf in front of ace, or to remit his taxes is of vital tance to hom—the very thing he may seen working for for years—but never-where the scene is constantly bright and lively, where people are constantly congregating and passing, and where the distart iron fence takes the place of the prison bars? Again: It is alleged that the convicts conflict with honest labor; that they do work which respectable men should be given. Also, that the prisoners in and about the State house, especially in the dark passages of the basement, frighten strangers, some of whom have really been known to flee for fear of attack. Of course there are reasons for retaining the convicts, and they have been urged with vigor by several legislators: it is said, too, that the squirrels object to a changer-because they are well fed and cared for now, and are content to let well-enough alone. However the matter is settled, its consideration will provoke much controversy, if by the past the future may be judged.

Several days before the recess for Christmas, the General Assembly met in joint session and counted the vote of the late election and found that P. W. McKinney, of Farmville, had been elected Governor, and Major J. Foge Tyler, of Pulaski, Lieutenant-Governor. These officers will be in augurated to-day at noon in the hall of the Buse of Delegates. Each house will meet 11 o'clock, according to agreement before in getting in shape for the ceremony. At 12 o'clock the Senate will take a recess, and, preceded by the presiding officer, march to the hall of the House, where seats will be assigned them. Speaker Cardwell will probably preside, and the Senate's presiding officer will sit beside him. The eler's of the House, Colonel John Bell Bigger, will ack as clerk of the joint assembly, and Clerk Pendleton, of the Senate, will sit beside him.

Prayer will be offered by Rev. Dr. Mosos oge. Then the announcement that the oregin and Licutenant Governor are esent will be made, and the Speaker will be made, and the Speaker will be the judge present, probably Judge wijs of the Supreme Court of Appeals, to minister the oath of office to cach. The th reads as follows:

The inaugural ceremony is always witnessed by large crowds of outsiders, and increar that the ladies may be given place, the castern gallery of the House will be reserved for them.

The Attornev-General, Hon. R. Taylor Scott, will also take his oath of office today. He can qualify before a notary public, but the Secretary of the Commonwealth usually administers the oath.

Philip Watshis alchamby and the New Store, Buckingham county, May 1, 1832, his father being Mr. Charles McKinney, Young McKinney graduated at Hampden-Sidney College, in the class of 1851, and received the medal of his society, the Philanthropic, as its best debator. This was the first time the honor had been given in the history of the college or of the society, and never has it been more worthily given since. He went from Hampden-Sidney to washington College, now Washington and Lee University, and prepared himself for the practice of the law under the guidance of that grand old gentled man and accomplished jurist, Judge Brockenbrough. Having been furnished for the fight, he returned to the home field and at once gained the confidence of his and his father's friends, and was, finally, established in a lucrative law business. Mrs. McKinney lived but a few years after marriage, and the subject of this sketch remained a widower until a few years since, when he married Miss Anna Lyle, the only daughter of the late Dr. James Lyle, who spent a long and honored life in the town of Farmville, and was recognized as the leading physician of south-side Virginia. Captain and Mrs. McKinney have as their home a charming cottage in Farmville, rendered attractive to them by "all creature comforts" and desirable luxuries, the pretty presence and the prattle of Frankie, a charming miss of two summers, and to others by the generous hespitality, the cordinal welcome, the cultivated society of a most delightful host and hossess. doing good service and winning enviab

MANCHESTER'S COUNCIL

The Manchester Council met last night in called session. Present, President Ferdue and Messrs. O'Brien, Weisiger, Beattie, Bradley, Hart, Harris.

The president announced that the object of the call was to pass an ordinance repealing an ordinance of July 26, 1889, appropriating $100,000 in bonds of the city for the purpose of paving, guttering and curbing the streets of Manchester, and of authorizinanew the appropriation of $100,000 for the same purpose.

Mr. O'Brien then asked it the money that came back on account of paving from the property owner could be used for any purpose. Mr. Perdue did not think it could. Mr. Beattie thought it could, and Mr. Bradey hoped the money could not be diverted, because he wanted to use that money for more street improvements. The ordinance was adorted.

After the adjournment of the Council, the finance and street committees held a joint session, during which the street committee reported that the amount of paving, guttering, and curbing done and contracted for amounts to $29,251.63. This amount is to come out of the $100,000 in bonds appropriated by the Council. riated by the Council.
